

providing further that foreign vessels might enter into coastwise trade. He sought, he said, to break up any existing American monopoly in coastwise shipping.

The bill provides that foreign-owned vessels may enter the ports of the United States to the same extent and under the restrictions imposed upon vessels of the United States, the President to prescribe and from time to time to change the tolls charged for the use of the Panama Canal by coastwise traffic. It is stipulated, however, that charges should as nearly as possible equal the expense of transporting such vessels through the canal, without seeking to cover any interest upon the investment in the United States in constructing the canal.

Senator Lewis also introduced a bill to give the President authority to suspend tolls "whenever consistent with the interests of the United States."

The amendment of the pending bill in the House remained practically unchanged today. Representative Admon, leading the fight for the repeal, declared the bill would pass by a large majority.

Representative Harrison, Democrat of Mississippi, was one of the speakers when the debate was resumed. Although admitting his anxiety to "follow the President," he said he would not "reconcile his conscience to the President's view and surrender to the principle of national honor and integrity."

Repeal is Surer.

Representative Knowland assailed the repeal as "surrendering to Great Britain with a struggle."

"Is the Panama Canal now the price of the elimination of Puerto?" he demanded.

Mr. Knowland urged the House, if it repealed the exemption, to declare that it had not surrendered the contention that the United States might make one.

Representative O'Shaunessy, Democrat of Rhode Island, spoke for the exemption, declaring the platform plank of the Baltimore convention for free passage should be free.

Representative Gardner, Republican of Massachusetts, supporting the bill, quoted from debates on the Hay-Paunefote treaty in the Senate to show that the spirit of the treaty was opposed to the exemption of American ships.

Representative Gray, Democrat of Indiana, supported the exemption.

Representative Chandler, Progressive of New York, opposed the repeal, declaring that the people in the 1912 election had endorsed the free plank of the various platforms, and that for one man to matter how high or low the tide of opinion is, now to reverse that position without an appeal to the people, is not the way of our fathers.

"I don't know what has frightened the President, but I do know that if Andrew Jackson had received from across the ocean a British ship, instead of sending to this House a cowardly message, he would have sent a message of defiance, and would have demanded a great appropriation to increase the standing army and buy new ships."

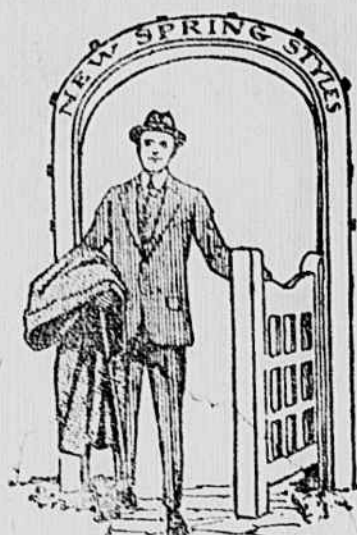

Representative Curry, of California, attacked the administration's foreign policy.

"The policies and achievements of the President certainly cannot be viewed with satisfaction and commendation by his political adherents," he said. "Experimental diplomacy has proven to be a failure."

loss, exclusive of the building, is estimated at $12,000, of which $8,000 is for horses, $3,000 for vehicles and $1,000 for harnesses.

Fourteen of the animals burned were horses, the remainder being the property of the Danforth-Notttingham Co., on which about $2,000 insurance was carried. The building belonged to the Danforth-Notttingham Co., and while an old and somewhat dilapidated structure, was estimated in value at about $5,000. It extended through the block from King to County Streets.

COMMITTEE TO ACT ON GAS QUESTION

Sale of Clarke's Spring Property Also on Calendar for Action This Week.

The subcommittee on Public Buildings, Properties and Utilities will meet tomorrow afternoon to consider a proposed ordinance relating to the Gas Department and the consumer. The ordinance proposes to make the city responsible for the gas supply from the main to the burner. The consumer must himself be responsible for results, but inspectors of the Gas Department will advise him as to fixtures to install if those in use are old or are not giving satisfaction. Chief Gas Inspector Shelton will appear before the committee to urge the passage of this ordinance.

The full committee on Public Buildings, Properties and Utilities will meet on Thursday night at 8 o'clock. The committee will take up the matter of the sale of the Clarke Springs property, for which the Hollywood Cemetery Association has offered the services of the West End Citizens' Association and the Clay Ward Democratic Club are opposed to the sale, and their opposition will be strongly voiced by Alderman John J. Mitchell, who does not believe that the historic interest of the famous cemetery will be increased by addition of more property. It has been pointed out that Riverview Cemetery also needs to be enlarged, and that the Clarke Springs property is available, and in this connection it has been urged on the committee that burial in Riverview Cemetery is much cheaper than in Hollywood.

The subcommittee on bridge approach will meet on Tuesday night at 8 o'clock.

SUFFRAGE LECTURE

Dr. Pollard to Discuss Bible's Attitude Towards Cause on Thursday.

With the purpose of refuting the contention that the Bible is against the teachings of the Bible, the Equal Suffrage League of Richmond has arranged for a lecture by Dr. B. Pollard, D. D., professor of homiletics in Crozer Seminary, Chester, Pa., at 8 o'clock on Thursday evening in the lecture hall of the League. Dr. Pollard is an earnest advocate of the suffrage cause, and is well versed in the history of the movement. He is the author of a book on "Oriental Women," in the series of books entitled "Women in All Ages and All Lands," published by the League of Richmond, and is well known here. The public is invited to attend the lecture.

RESOLUTIONS OF RESPECT

ROBERT STRINGFELLOW WALKER.

RESOLUTIONS ADOPTED BY THE students and masters of Woodberry Forest School, at a session of the Faculty of the University of Virginia, March 21, 1914.

Whereas, it has pleased God to take from our midst the beloved, respected and honored founder of Woodberry Forest School, TAIN ROBERT STRINGFELLOW WALKER, who died at University Hospital, University of Virginia, 545 P. M., on Saturday, March 14, 1914;

And whereas, by his untiring energy and persistent effort, was established this institution, which stands as a permanent monument to the memory of higher and thorough education;

And whereas, by his death the school community has lost a sympathetic friend, a helpful member, a wise counselor, and a Christian gentleman, therefore,

Resolved, first, That Captain Walker had endeavored himself to us all by his cheerful, kindly manner, his simple, abiding Christian faith, his strong sense of justice, his fidelity to every duty, his tender regard for those in need and distress, and his genuine worth as a man.

Resolved, second, That we recognize in his death a loss to the school and the school community which is irreparable.

Resolved, third, That we tender to his surviving wife and family our warmest and kindest sympathy in this affliction which has come upon them, and we pray that the source of affliction may be the well-spring of consolation, and that prayerful reflection may show to us all the realization that he who reigns above knows best in all things.

Resolved, fourth, That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of Captain Walker, and that they be published in the school paper, the school annual, the Orange, Va., papers, The Times-Dispatch, of Richmond, Va., the Covina Argus, of Covina, Cal., and the Southern Churchman.

A TRIBUTE

ROBERTSON.—Died, at her residence on Park Street, in Charlottesville, Va., on the morning of the 26th of March, 1914, at the age of 74 years, a reasonable, religious and holy woman, and in favor with God and man, MRS. ALICE W. ROBERTSON, widow of Judge William J. Robertson, of Charlottesville.

Robertson was a daughter of General Edward Watts and his wife, Elizabeth Brockbridge, of "Grove Hill," near Court County, Virginia, and was born at Rockland, Va., in 1840. Her father's residence in Roanoke County, Va., on April 1, 1857.

In 1857 she married Dr. George W. Morris, then a resident of South Carolina, a member of the distinguished Morris family, and there and of this union was born one child, the late Judge George W. Morris, of Charlottesville. Dr. Morris' death occurred at his home in South Carolina before the birth of his son, and his young widow returned to her native place to live, where in 1863 she became the second wife of Judge William J. Robertson. Of this marriage were born five children, of whom two daughters, Mrs. Garnett, of New York, and Mrs. R. H. Hanes, of Norfolk, Va., and one son, Judge Edward W. Robertson, of Roanoke, survive.

The death of Mrs. Robertson will bring regret to many, both of the loss of the young and beautiful life, and of the loss of a noble character. Though there are few surviving who can remember her in the days of her girlhood, yet her fame as one of the belles of the South, and the time, who fascinated and delighted all that came within her charming presence, still lingers, and there are friends and guests innumerable of the succeeding years who will recall to mind the kindness and the dignity that characterized for more than three decades her gracious administration of the post of hostess in her home in Charlottesville. In a house overflowing with a generous welcome, where the doors were ever open, and in which her relatives and friends, and those of the members of her family, were constantly coming and going, she was always the central figure of a shining throng of intellect and wit and charm. To very many of these, and especially to the many of the former students of the University of Virginia, she counted her friend with affectionate admiration, the announcement of the death of Mrs. Robertson cannot fail to bring a pang of sorrow.

Those who were bound to her by the closer ties of blood and relationship there is none who will not cherish her memory for the exalted nobility of her character and for the depth and sincerity of her affection.

It happened that in her long life of more than four-score years she had seen more of the tragedy of life than most of the allotted span inevitably brings; but she bore herself through all the sorrows and woes that encompassed her latter years with a heroic courage and a noble self-abnegation that won for her always renewed and increased admiration and affection from those who knew and loved her.

It may be truly said of her that she was a noble illustration of the dignity and worth of the finest type of the Virginia matron; and that when she was, in the deepest and truest sense, an humble and devoted servant of Christ in His kingdom. That the light of God may shine upon her and give her perpetual peace will be the prayer of the many who have known and loved her.
